Description :

PDF-5c461 | Psychological research into human cognition and judgment reveals a wide range of biases and shortcomings. Whether we form impressions of other people, recall episodes from memory, report our attitudes in an opinion poll, or make important decisions, we often get it wrong. The errors made are not trivial and often seem to violate common sense and basic logic. A closer look at the underlying process... Cognition and Communication: Judgmental Biases, Research Methods, and the Logic of Conversation (Distinguished Lecture Series)
